New Lands Farm's mission is to empower new Americans through agricultural projects to honor their food traditions, earn supplemental income, and contribute in a meaningful way to their new community and the local food system. Our program aims to help these individuals in hopes they will one day become independent farmers. Our collective farmers grow food on small-scale plots and use organic methods. They have rich cultural backgrounds rooted in subsistence farming and come from places like the Congo, Burundi, and Bhutan. This year we are also having produce bought from other small-scale local growers!

Our collective CSA will run from the week of June 18th until the week of October 8th. Each share should feed a family of 4, and has a value of $500. Our farmers will see 80% of this income. The rest will be used for administration and purchasing costs. Attached is a crop plan with estimated delivery dates and amounts of the crops we are growing on your behalf.
